We are responsible for the future of our rural areas

Civil society and politics agree that rural communities and regions must be conserved as independent and multifaceted living environments. Hereby, the prudential management of land as well the sustainable usage of resources in agriculture and forestry will be major issues. We want to cope with this task with an all-embracing concept that integrates development in rural areas as well as progress within communities and our core competences in space management and public participation. Hereby, we will proceed with our successful concept as leading partner of local communities, farmers and property owners for competence management.

We are going to focus even more on climate protection, for example through the development of energy concepts, on the adaption to climate change, for example through water backing projects that include various communities, as well as on demographic developments, for example through a shift to progress within community centers, and on securing of basic services.
